Memorandum of Understanding

Faculty of Public Health and the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry

Background

This document outlines the complementary roles of the two organisations and proposes a more formal engagement and representation to facilitate improvement of health and wellbeing.

The Faculty of Public Health is the professional home of public health, responsible for training of and standards for public health specialists and consultants in the UK. In addition to its professional standards and training role, the Faculty undertakes policy and advocacy on public health issues, informed by a network of special interest groups. It has formal relationships and representations from the three Royal Colleges of Physicians in the UK.

The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry (BASCD) is a specialist society with interests in health intelligence (BASCD expertise underpins co-ordinated NHS dental epidemiology programmes across the UK nations) as well as an interest in health improvement. It has a number of members on the General Dental Council Specialist list for dental public health. Most of these colleagues are members of the Faculty of Dental Surgery at one of the Royal Colleges with some also being members of the Faculty of Public Health. BASCD has representation on the board of the Faculty of Dental Surgery in the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

The Faculty of Public Health already recognises dental public health specialist training as equivalent to public health training for the purposes of application for consultant roles. A number of BASCD members are also Fellows of the Faculty via the specialist portfolio UKPHR route. The dental public health specialists and oral health promotion practitioners contribute to the broader public health workforce and is included within the FPH workforce strategy. The Faculty has advocated on oral health issues over a number of years and a Dental Public Health Consultant has served as a board member of the Faculty of Public Health.
